HONGKING, JANUARY 14TH, 1874.

THE SURVEYOR-GENERAL, doubtless with the best intentions, wanders somewhat beyond his legitimate province in the recommendation which he makes that the Colony, on he suggests, and boldly launch into the expenditure of £300,000. financial bearing of the matter is a question entirely for the Legislative Council, and the way. The Dutch forces are insufficient, and report from the SURVEYOR-GENERAL Would have been better if he had confined himself strictly to the point of the money which would be required for the work, and refrained from touching upon the desirability or otherwise of spending it.

If Mr. Price's report is to be taken as a thorough exposition of all that can be done in the Colony with a view to obtaining a good and permanent water supply, we may take it as certain that there will be nothing lest for the residents in Hongkong to do, but did not put in an appearance, but P. to make the best of the existing state of when the defendant came down, and said affairs. The present supply of water is not that the barkeeper of the "British Orown" perfect, but it does not, on the other hand, entail any very serious inconvenience; denied this. and certainly is not such as to justify J. Smith, the barkeeper of the "British the Colony in any such expenditure as that Crown," denied paying the chair, as he went which is proposed. No doubt the idea of a Defendant was fined 50 cents, for getting loan, to be liquidated by debentures, or some drunk. other-plan of the kind, will be mooted; but such step for the sake of the end which is in view. If it be borne in mind that the interest upon the sum of $1,500,000 would amount, at 6 per cent., to $90,000 per annum, it will, we think, be clear to all that the pro. in Taipingshan, with assaulting him on the ject is far too extensive for the resources of Praya Central, on the 18th instant. the Colony; and if Mr. PRICE is correct in stating that any other plan than the one he proposes would be a mistake, it would be better to bear the ill we have, in the form of some inconvenience as to the water supply, than to fly to one we know. -not of, in the form of an enormous liability on the Colony. If the place were progressing and increasing in size and prosperity, such a step might be justified, but it would be little ing and creating a disturbance in Second-street, short of absolute folly, in the face of the

The project for the new road Eastwards seems somewhat to inflicting two cuts. run in this direction, and the water works scheme would be a still more serious entrance upon a path which is as dangerous to a community as to an individual. A Colony such as Hongkong, has not any resources which can be relied upon to defray large annual expenditure. If the trade left Hongkong, which, as matters are drifting at present, may happen to a large extent, the merchants would have to leave the Coloni also, or at least have much smaller establishrunning a great risk to incur a beavy debt.

There are also two points in connection concerned in the same, on the 12th instant. with Mr. Price's report, which after its quantity of water for each inhabitant at population of the Colony consists of Chinese.

very far, before we cause JOHNNY CHINAMAN the good entrusted to their care by merchants to use one tenth of this quantity. A similar, consideration also arises in regard to the amount per head which it would be reasonable to expect the population to pay. A large number of the Chinese are poor people, living on three or four dollars a month, from whom it would be impossible to expect any large payment for the purposes of obtaining Under all the circumstances, therefore, it would cortainly appear advisable to leave the water question in aboyance, until there is a more obvious occasion for action, or until possibly some more economical scheme can be devised. The matter, looked at strictly, is one of comfort and convenience, and not of necessity; and there will scarcely be two vant unemployed, residing in Lower Lascur stances, and above all, in the face of a state of opinions that only a pressing necessity would justify the Colony in incurring any such liability as that which is proposed.

quin by the steamer Sallie. It appears that M. Garnier has been caught in an ambusende, and massacred with several of his men, and Mr. Balmy, an ensign, has disappeared. cause of this hostility is unknown, but it is attributed to some bands of Chinese robbers who have for some years infested Tonquin, and this time the opium was left in the boat. The whose explaits were menaced by our prasence. If matters are as supposed, the population has not been, concerned in this deed, and the death of M. Garnier, which will at the same time be an irreparable loss to Science, will have less serious consequences on the success of political movements which we are carrying out. Our readers will understand all the reserve which is imposed upon as under such circumfacts which is as yet only imperfectly known. The transport La Sarthe is to leave to-day, with 230 men as reinforcements for Hannoi. Philastre, Inspector of Indian affairs, who left for Hué a month ago, and who is at this moment in Tonquin, will replace M. Garnier provisionally, in the direction of the expedition.

LIGHT, MORE LIGHT!

The Times says that on the occasion of his recent visit to Glasgow, Mr. Dieraeli attended Diving service at Glusgow University Chapel. The Very Rev. Principal Caird officiated. The presence of Mr. Disraeli and the high reputation of the preacher attracted an immense crowd of people. The Lord Rector, who were his robes of office, and who was accompanied by Mr. Edward Gordon, the member for the Un versities of Glasgow and Aberdeen, occupied one of the seats reserved for the senators in the north aisle; the Professors, who also appeared in academic costame, and a number of the members of the University Conneil, were also present. The service occupied nearly two bours about half of the time being taken up with the sermon. The text was taken from the 8th and 9th verses of the 14th chapter of John's St. Gospel While Dr. Caird was delivering one of his finest. passages, an amusing incident occurred. The weather was very dull, and about balf-past 3 o'clock the light, in the chapel was very bad. The Principal at this time came to a sentence in his sermon in which occurred the words "O for light, more light," when the bendle turned on the gas, and the building was in an instant brilliantly illuminated. The Preacher looked a little disconcerted, and the circumstance provoked a suppressed titter from the SINGULAR AFFAIR. At the weekly meeting of the Shore litch Guardians Board, the clerk called attention to curious case of mistaken identity. A few weeks back an old man expired suddenly on the steps of a shop in the parish. He was recognised by some persons as a man who had been employed in the gasworks, and a deputation of his supposed fellow-workmen went to his house to break the sad intelligence to his family. When they arrived there, however, they were told by the wife that her husband to be the case. The body of the unknown man was removed to the workhouse, and there it was again ident fied by some of the officers as that of a pauper who had been in the house from 12 to 14 months. Letters were sent to his relations, who livel in Manchest r, and one of his sous-in-law consequently came up, he also recognising the body. An inquest was held, and other witnesses from Manchester. swore to the identity of the deceased. On their return home-they wrote an account of the circumitances connected with the death of their relation to some friends in Devonshire, and in the course of a fortnight they received a reply stating that the old man was alive there, and well. The deceased, therefore, having twice been mistaken for some other person, had not been identified after all. -Telegraph.

A LITTLE BOY IMAGINING HIMSEL specting a salmon river, a remarkably strong notive, intelligent little boy, between four an five years old, playing about a weir. The father told me a very ourious story about the child. Last Christinas he was taken to see a pantumime, in which monkeys performed a mind that the next morning he imagined himself to be a monkey. He would not speak, and no kindness or threats would make him spouk a single word: he would not sit at table with his brothers and sisters at meals, but would only cat out of a plate placed on the ground out of which he ate his food, being on all fours. If anything to est was presented to him, he always put it to his nose and smelt it just as a monkey does before enting it. He was continually climbing up trees and throwing down boughs and grinning at the people below. like the monkeys in the cocornut trees in the pantomime. When his father tried to correct rim, the little fellow, still on all fours, ran after him and bit him on the leg. He would serve his brothers and sisters the same if they teased him. This curious monkey fit lasted until a few weeks ago; the idea has now quite passed out of his head. I wonder if this story may possibly be of any use to Mr. Darwin. -FRANK BUCKLAND.

"THE AWKWARD AGE." A wise and sweet woman suggests, as sovereign remedy for the nucomfortableness of that which we are wont to call the awkward age in boys and girls—that time when they are too enough of themselves to feel like adults—that we should always treat even the smallest children with the courtesy and consideration that we show to grown-up people, and then they will never, feel at a loss as to their recention, thus quite escaping the uncertain and unconfortable awkward age. There are few things more important in the right development of a human creature than self-respect; but how is a child to learn to respect itself if it sees that it is alone in thesentiment—that by no one clae is it respected? More barm is perhaps done children by anabbing than even by weak indulgence. We have all seen homes where the slightest 'expression of a child's idea on any point under what you thought?" or with some sarcasm such as "Ah, now we shall have the matter a ttled-Miss Experience is freeing her mind." We do not want our children troublesome to visitors—grown-up people do not care to panse board and lodging. THE TICHBORNE TRIAL.

(Telegraph.) 129TH DAY.-NOVEMBER 27TH. Yesterday was commenced the so-called rebutting case for the Crown. To make its purport clear, we must recapitulate a few facts. That Roger Tichborne sailed from Rio in the Bella is admitted; that the Bella was wrecked is also admitted. But here begins the difference: for the defendant alleges that he, with five others, escaped from the Bella in a boat, yns picked up by the Osprey, and was carried nto Melbourne; while for the prosecution it is alleged that the Osprey is a phantom ship, of whose existence there is no manner of proof. If, it was urged, there ever was an Osprey, some witness from her ought to be forthcoming. But, was the reply, they are all dead or seattered in the attermost parts of the earth. Why, it was asked, is there no record in the Gustom House at Melbourne of the Osprey's arrival? recause, was the answer, the gold fever, was raging, and nobody took any. notice of anything. But, it was asked again, why is no one brought forward connected in: any way with the Ospray? Where are ber owners? Where are her agents? Where is the record of the Custom House from which she rant vendor of crockery was really a foreign devil' from the outer world. I hope that I shall not be credited with any unworthy feeling when I say frankly that I did not like Lake very much. It was not my fault, us I now know; but at the time I often took myself sharply to task for not being more drawn towards one in whom there was so much to please. But facts are stubborn things, and the fact remains that I tried to like my Americomrade, and failed, apparently for no better reason than that which the popular distich assigns for an antipathy to Dr. Fell. , But the truth was that, while pleased, as all were, by the gay and winning manner of Julian Lake, and while admitting his superiority in social accomplishments ungradgingly enough, could not quite bring myself to trust him-Something there was in the showy exterior of my clever young colleague that cried, at least to me, beware! Not that Lake did, or was rumoured to have done, anything which the most censorious of inognitate could set down as a dishonourab e action. On the contrary, he was "almost affected in his punctiliousness with respect to money matters, never anticipated his salmy, as some of the more ensy-going clerks were upt to do, and declined to take a band-abeither whist or courte, or indeed at any game where stakes were lost or won, because, as he laughingly said, he played cards too well; the kings and aces would do whatever he chose.

I rather suspect, too, that I was a little uneasy at observing that Julian admired Constance Barnet, and that he was very attentive to her; not obtrusively so-it was not in his nature to be obtrasive—but in a quiet deferential fashion. that would have flattered and fascinated many a less true-bearted girl than my cousin. The olever young American was a great favourite in Anglo-Chinese society, and was especially fortunate in winning the suffrages of such few unmarried ladies as might be found in Shanghai drawing-rooms; but Constance never joined in the general oh rus of his praise. I think, somehow, that she was almost afraid of him. Perhaps_that singular instinctive power of pieroing below the surface of character, which women so often possess, and which not seldom reveals a truth which the deductions from worldly experience have failed to elicit, had warned her that a bard and unscrupulous nature lay hidden behind all that gloss and glitter, which, in Julian Lake, served to blind the judgment of the world at large.

And certainly his skill in sleight of hand was something extraordinary,

One justification I had at any vate, for what often appeared to myself as a wrongful prejudice against Lake. My American colleague, soft-spoken and refined as he was, and conside. rate of the feelings of his equals as he approved himself in general intercourse, was not very tendered-hearted towards the brute creation. I have heard of his being known to drown a wretched dog, out of pure wantonness, and to derive amusement from watching the struggles and imploring looks of the poor animal, as it strove in vain to scramble back into the boat, and was pushed back again and again into the waves. He would undoubtedly kill flies-and the undersigned in his own name. we have many in China, some of which are bigger and noisier than the haniliar British bluebottle-with a gusto that reminded-me, disagreeably, of Domitian. the principal, Mr. Barnet. Julian, like many of his fellow-citizens, had a hearty contempt and dislike for all inferior ruces. A dark skin was with him a badge of ecorn, that placed the luckless owner of it below the level of human sympathy; and he open ly ridiculed the idea that the dusky heathers | ultimo, by lapse of time. around him had any claim to an equal measure assorted only too well with sentiments, expressed by the younger and more unthinking of our associates, in whose eyes a "nigger" was but a grade above the gorilla, in the social scale, and who regarded an Asiatic of whatsoever rank, country, or hue, as superciliously as the dandies of amoient Athens were need to contemplate the L Hongkong and Ohina between W. elave population that did their lordly bidding. But, at any rate, if our counting-house subalterns, our third officers of clipper-ships, and our 'young gentlemen' from the corvette on duty at the station, scoffed at the Chinese, they did not ill-treat them, and the free-banded English fashion in which they tossed about their loose cash fully made up in popular estimation rated, and carried on under the name and style many as any other Dictionary hitherto pubfor a little roughness of speech. I was once in Mr. Lincoln's company when a sectarian discussion arose. He himself looked very grave, and made no observation untiball the others had finished what they had to say. Then, with a twinkle of the eye, he remarked that he preferred the Episcopalians to every other sect, because they are equally indifferent to a man's religion and his

LINCOLN'S JOKES.

It happened that at one time a blockaderunner going out of Charleston harbour was captured, and on board of her were found in that city for his own Government. Those despatches were very improperly opened by the captor, and then forwarded to the State Department at Washington. Mr. Seward, immediately after he received them, sent for the Spanish-Minister, Mr. Tassara, and. with expressions of regret that the envelopes had been tampered with, offered him the despatches. The Minister, highly indignant, declined to receive them. Then Mr. Seward proposed to forward them to their destination through the medium of our own agents. This proposition was equally unacceptable, and the Secretary of State was at a loss what to do. He shortly afterwards explained the difficulty to the President, whom it reminded of "little story." "When I lived in Indiana." he said, "there resided very near us an old negro known as 'Uncle Josh.' He was a very pious darkey; but was so infirm that it was impossible for him to go to the neighbouring school-house to listen to an itinerant preacher who might happen to discourse there on Sunday. However, in order to make up as far heretofore. as possible for his own ability to attend, he always compelled his grandchildren to go; and they-were required not only to recollect the text, but also to be able to give the old man some account of the sermon. On one occa sion a Methodist came and preached. He told the congregation that there were two kinds of people in this world-Methodists and Bantists-that the Methodists followed a road that led to heaven, and the Baptists one that led to Hell. The next Sunday there present- Policies at current rates, payable either here ed himself a hard-shell Baptist, who had heard I in London, or at the principal ports of India. about the sermon of his Methodist brother. He told his auditors that it was true that there were two kinds of people in the world -Methodists and Baptists-and that they followed different roads; but that it was the Baptist road that led to beaven, and the Melhodist road that led to hell. When Uncle Josh-heard-this, he scratched his wool and said: Each one says that there are only two | all premium charged for insurance; such disroads, and that his own leads to heaven and count being deducted at the time of the issue the other to hell. go across lots?' Seward, you will have to THE REV. EDWARD IRVING. Few of the present generation think of the Rev. Edward Irving except perhaps as a superstitious enthusiast; yet, with all his eccentri cities, he was a man eminently worth know? , ing and listening to. Educated to the Scottish Church, his powers as a public teacher. brilliant at once and logical, were first discovered by Dr. Chalmers, whose assistant he was for three years. Within a few months after he was called to the Caledonian Church, Hatton-garden, London, he became the most popular preacher of his day. Tickets of admission, by which alone outsiders could have a chance-to-hear him, were eagerly sought after: and the two which admitted my father and myself were obtained as a special favour. The highest nobility, the most eminent men of science, literary and fashionable celebrities, famous beauties, judges, distinguished barris. ters, noted members of Parliament, all pressed in crowds to his weekly services. We found every street that led to his church literally encumbered with stylish equipages; and though we had gone early, it was with great exortions that we penetrated the excited throng, bare-· ly in time to get seats. But we were iewarded. The personal appearance of the speaker at once arrested my attention. Over six feet high, limbs and body finely proportioned, the apon insurances effected with this Company.

ample forehead surmounted by a mass of jet.

DOUGLAS LAPRAIK & Co., black hair, parted in the centre and dropping in carls on his shoulders; the features regular and expressive, especially the piercing black eyes (their effect somewhat marred, however, by a squint); a stately bearing, and a majestic style of eloquence, such as might befit an apostle, conscious of a mission from on high gestures sometimes, indeed, outre, even fantastic, yet often startling emphatic,-everything about him was strange, strong, telling. The man himself and his weird aspect at first engrossed one's thoughts: yet when he fairly warmed to his subject, and the stirring tones of a voice at once persuasive and commanding gradually asserted their magnetic power, one forgot the speaker and all his peculiarities, listening, not to the words, but the thoughts, fiery and carnest, -thoughts, one instinctively felt, that had their origin down in the depths o issue Policies of Insurance, at the current of conscientious conviction. Wedlock was the theme; and it was treated by comparing with the true marriage of soul and spirit the fashionable espousals, based on mercenary motive and worldly calculation. First he pourtrayed, in terms which lost none of their force by quaint old turns of expression, the self-forgetting devotion of two faithful hearts. "They see through a sweet glamour," he said, THE Undersigned are prepared to grant "yet what they see is more real than all other sublunary things. How fair and pleasant are they to each other, yes, altogether lovely All that is blithe and beautiful upon earth is the interpreter of their love. The voice of birds echoes it. The flowers fresh with heaven's dew, are its expounders. 'I am my beloved's (the virgin saith), and my beloved is mine. Her desire is unto him by day and night; in dream her soul waketh to his image He counts his life as nothing for her sake: th world of happiness is where she is; he has none other. Everything about her has an unutterable charm. Her eyes are dove's eyes and they overcome him; her breath is like the appear that has swept the spices of Araby.

Yet there is between them a mutual enchantment far deeper, more holy, than any idolatry of person. When they stand up at God's altar, invoking on their young affection ecclesiastical blessing, the inner cry, is,

'O' thou whom my soul leveth!' It is a mat-church but records yows long since plighted

in the heart of hearts: and their is a transcript of the record in Heaven's chancery.

God looks down, well pleased; for his children have fulfilled his law. - Robert Dale Owen, in Atlantio Monthly.

THE OLDEST CODGER ALIVE. The very oldest of living mortals has at last been brought to light by the Anglo-Brazilian Times, in the person of Jose Martine Continho, born at Saquavema, May 20th 1694, and the father of forty-two children, from whom have descended in the four-successive generations one hundred and twentythree, eighty-six, twenty-three, and twenty others, making two hundred and ninety-four slight stiffness in his legs is the only physical mark which his hundred and seventynine years of life have placed upon Mr. Continho, and his mental powers are still such as to enable him to digest the "news from Spain," which he eagerly reads each day without glasses. He likes to tell the story of his fights against the Dutch at Pernambucco, a century and a half ago, and to their Contents...... per cent. per annum talk about the reigns of Don John V., Don Jose and Donna Maria I. Unless the troubles soon cease, he expects to cross the ocean again and give his services to the Carlists.

GAS A FUEL A contemporary save "that it is more than probable that our children will live to look back upon our wasteful, troublesome, and expensive fires as we do upon old-time tallow dips and the fetching of water in buckets from the town pump." This no doubt is true, for con--siderable waste occurs in the method now usedto extract heat from coal, besides the labour required to cart the coal and house it, and earry it up to the various fires. In gas, however, we have a form of heat that can be carried to any required spotthrough pipes, having ilmost neither smoke nor smell, and which can be made available for any purpose. The saving that may be affected by gas is immense. for in the manufacture we have first the gas then tar, ammonia, crude auilines, &c., from which the most important industries have been started, and finally a fuel which can utilised in many ways remains in the retort in an ordinary fire, however, the coals are not certain despatches from the Spanish Consul half consumed, large volumes of combustible / THE Undersigned having been appointed oil and carbon passing off as smoke. There are now no excuse to be made for not using gas-stoves; they may not present so cheerful an appearance as coal fires, but taking into consideration the immense saving and the very high rate charged for coals, we may conscientiously recommend the use of these stoyes for all purposes of warming and cooking.-Family Hevald.
